7 Change Management Sites to "Stash in Your Cache"

Welcome to Summer 2019!

A time when we all get to lavish in our favorite ("fav's") and not feel guilty, right? At least that's my motto.

And in the name of lavishing, I thought it might be fun to share a few of my fav's with you.

Favorite Beach: Stone Harbor, NJ

Favorite Ice Cream Flavor: Peppermint Stick (or anything minty for that matter)

Favorite Ice Cream Shop: Springers of Stone Harbor.....of course!

Favorite Summer Dinner: Steak, corn on the cob and sliced tomatoes sloppishly drenched in Italian dressing.

Favorite Summer Memory: The hot summer night air blowing through my hair as I rode in a special 1970 Porsche convertible, blue, falling deeply in love with the guy at the wheel.

But hence I digress.... so let me put on my "business hat" back on.

I'm a lifelong learner, craving new information all the time that will me keep up-to-date on leading edge ideas in this wonderful field of organizational change management.

And since I've a passion for helping you to build your change management competencies, below I've listed 7 of my choice change management resources that I have "stashed in my cache" for easy reference.

You might also find them helpful!

1. Conner Partners (Darryl Conner) - For four decades, Conner Partners has a demonstrated history of breaking new ground in helping organizations implement change. Many organizations use the Conner method to implement their change initiatives.

2. Agile Change (Melanie Franklin) – Melanie’s focus is in aligning Agile Project Management and Change Management practices to produce Agile Change Management solutions. Melanie has a knack for “demystifying” Agile.

3. Lean Change Management (Jason Little) – Jason is a pioneer in the field of combining the best ideas from Agile, Lean Startup, Change Management and Design Thinking. A project manager by training, Jason was one of the first out of the gate to begin thinking of ways to reduce the change management cycle.

4. Hacking for Agile Change (Lena Ross) – Lena’s organizational change practice draws on the principles of Agile, Neuroscience and Human Centered Design. One of my favorite products of Lena’s is “Ponderfy” – a deck of 52 cards that can be used to “pause and think” about what we’ve accomplished, how we perceive the world around us and what we have the potential to achieve.

5. Conversations of Change (Dr. Jen Frahm) – You won’t find much distance between Jen and our colleague Lena Ross as these two Aussie girls are forging their way forward to educate folks in the profession offering “bite sized chunks” of learning to build change capabilities within organizations (something I’m extremely passionate about doing also).

6. Change Management Review (Theresa Moulton) – Theresa’s vision of producing a resource for organizational change management practitioners was merely a sparkle in her eyes two years ago. Today, the publication has garnered respect from around the world, regularly offering insightful articles, webinars and podcasts.

7. Change Management Institute (CMI) – this global professional association, created by and operated by members, strives to push the boundaries of the change management profession. CMI was one of the first to establish a formal competency model and accreditation scheme. Additionally, CMI has proudly authored "The Effective Change Manager: The Change Management Body of Knowledge (CMBok).
